

Ms. Parker's Team Tally

| Categories | Questions | Points |
|-------------|---|--------|
| Home | One point for each person living in your home who wears glasses/contacts. | _____ |
| | One point for each magnet on your home refrigerator (estimate). | _____ |
| | One point for each time this summer you hung out a load of laundry to dry. | _____ |
| School | One point for each team member who secretly has been really interested in a science topic in class but didn't want the teacher to know. | _____ |
| | One point for each team member who secretly has been really interested in a science topic in class but didn't want classmates to know. | _____ |
| | One point for each science class you have taken at LS. | _____ |
| | One point for each team member who has used something learned in a math class in real life. | _____ |
| | One point for each team member who has ever tutored a classmate. | _____ |
| | One point for each calculator team members have with them now. | _____ |
| | One point for each pen or pencil team members have with them now. | _____ |
| Experiences | One point for each team member who has flipped a coin to make a decision. | _____ |
| | One point for each team member who has rubbed a balloon on a piece of clothing then stuck it to a wall. | _____ |
| | One point for each team member who has ever gotten a shock off a doorknob or car door. | _____ |
| | One point for each team member who has ever tried to levitate something with his or her mind. | _____ |
| Thoughts | One point for each team member who has wondered why glass is see-through but walls are not. | _____ |
| | One point for each team member who has wondered what it would feel like to be weightless on the Space Station. | _____ |
| | One point for each team member who has wondered what would happen if our Sun became a black hole. | _____ |

TEAM TOTAL POINTS: _____